Brock

Brock Maxwell, who recently completed the fourth grade at Burbank Elementary School in Burbank, has demonstrated the character pillar of citizenship during the past school year. Brock volunteered to help put up and take down the school's flags. As the year progressed, Brock became the only student willing to take care of the flags. Brock spent his extra time in the morning and afternoon to see that the flags were put up and put away properly. He was loyal to this duty all year, in all kinds of weather. One day, Brock was absent and nobody put the flags up. This prompted Brock to teach the younger students the process because he would soon be going onto the middle school. Because of Brock's dedication, the school now has several trained third graders to continue taking care of the flags.

Thank you Brock for being such a model citizen.
