Taylor

Taylor Lazarto, a 6th grader at East Canton Middle School, has demonstrated the character pillars of responsibility and caring. When Taylor learned about the plight of young girls her age in Cambodia and Thailand being sold into the slave trade, she decided to do something to help. For more than a year now, Taylor has been making and selling chocolate suckers to help raise money to help these girls. All profits from the sales have gone to the ministry of Remember Nhu, which provides homes and education for girls who are at risk. Since starting the program, Taylor has raised almost $200. This is enough money to cover expenses for the care and education of one girl for a period of over four months. Taylor's sensitivity and compassion for the girls on the other side of the globe, as well as her personal discipline and sense of responsibility to do something concrete to help, is a wonderful example to all of us.

Thank you Taylor, for your sense of responsibility to help others in need.
